

DELL'S ADAMO LAPTOP AND APPLE'S LATEST IPOD SHUFFLE

CNET-TV Senior Editor Natali Del Conte had first looks at two new consumer products that are getting big buzz, on The Early Show on Tuesday, March 17, 2009:

Dell Adamo:

Soon-To-Be-Released; A Likely Competitor For Apple's MacBook Air (And Very Similar In Appearance)

- Price: $1999
- Where to buy: Dell.com
- Biulled as "world's thinnest laptop" at 0.55 millimeters thick -- thinner than MacBook Air
- They are calling it a "luxury brand notebook"
- They will release an entire ecosystem of products around it such as a case and mouse
- Made with tempered glass
- Adamo is Latin for "fall in love with"

For much more on Adamo, from CNET, go to this address:

http://reviews.cnet.com/laptops/dell-adamo/4505-3121_7-33560244.html

New Apple Shuffle

- How much: $79
- Where to buy: Apple Store or apple.com/ipod
- 4 gigs of storage, which amounts to about 5,000 songs
- Half the size of the old one because the control buttons are on the headphone cables
- Plus and minus for volume and a clicker in the middle.
- Pressing once will pause, two clicks will skip forward, three clicks will go backwards.
- First shuffle that literally tells you what song you're playing. When you press and hold the clicker, a synthetic voice tells you the name of the song. Press the button longer, and you get a list of the play lists on the shuffle, which you can select by pressing the button again.
- Voice works in 14 languages, which you won't hear unless you press and hold the button
- You can disable the voice in iTunes if you hate it
- If you lose the headphones, you have to shop around for a replacement pair that includes Apple's clicker remote
- This shuffle won't appeal to everyone because of the quirky controls and size but it does make it one of the more exciting MP3 players in its storage capacity and price range

FOR MORE on this, from CNET: http://cnettv.cnet.com/2001-1_53-50005465.html