

The International Home and Housewares Show (<http://www.housewares.org/show/info>) is the world's largest showcase for thousands of new products.

This year's show, in Chicago, just ended.

On The Early Show Thursday, March 26, 2009, David Gregg of BehindTheBuy.com showcased some of this year's highlights.

Editor's note: The following descriptions were prepared with info provided in full or part by the manufacturers:

xpressa by Oranfresh

Expressa is a revolutionary, totally automatic citrus juicer. The Expressa cuts and squeezes whole oranges and fills three glasses of juice, 6-7 oz., per minute. The machine deposits spent peels in its disposal drawer. Scaled for household use, Expressa mimics larger Oranfresh machines but fits nicely on a kitchen countertop.

360 Cookware

It looks like regular pots and pans, but is much different than traditional cookware. The unique shape, premium metals and precision that goes into manufacturing 360 Cookware creates a revolutionary cooking technique called Vapor Cooking. Vapor Cooking simply means food cooks utilizing its own natural moisture --- without adding unnecessary water, oils or fats. No more boiling, steaming or drowning flavor and nutrients out of food. Meals practically cook themselves - using less energy (cooks on low heat) and fewer ingredients. The result is delicious food the way it was meant to taste - made in high performance cookware.

Le Creuset Cookware

Color is synonymous with Le Creuset cookware and the original graded Flame orange is recognized the world over as Le Creuset! The color is blended into the enamel and is fired at a high temperature to fuse it to the cast iron. The finish converts the raw iron into a piece of cookware that is not only gorgeous to look at but hard-wearing efficient too. Le Creuset offers cookware in a wide range of colors. Bright vibrant colors, pastels and neutrals, from the most classical to the most contemporary, enabling you to match your cookware to your home décor and tableware.

Pizzapartment

The dilemma of how to store that left over pizza has finally been solved with the Pizzapartment. This product will fit any triangular shaped pizza slices and will hold up to half a pizza! The units are self-contained so no lids or tops are needed and they will keep slices from sticking together. The containers are refrigerator and freezer safe for storage, and microwave and dishwasher safe to make it easy to re-heat and clean. No more fighting your fridge to fit the leftover pizza box or wastefully using multiple plates and wrapping materials. The Pizzapartment comes in 4 colors, including a special Breast Cancer Pink, with donation made to cancer research with each purchase.
