

Matt's "Man-Management"

It is very important for women to understand that most men's initial intentions are to just sleep with the woman that they are initially attracted to. They do not have the genetic capability to even think of a relationship at this time. In fact most all men whether they are single, dating or married involuntarily and subconsciously classify women into two different categories as they walk down any busy city street. As every woman passes they are classified into "would sleep with" or wouldn't sleep with categories. Those women classified into the "would sleep with" category are given top priority and showered with attention. These women initially also have a power over men that usually they are not aware of and certainly do not exercise. The women that are categorized into the "wouldn't sleep with" category are mostly inconsequential to most men. Men as everyone knows, are driven by the potential of a sexual relationship with the woman that currently interests them at any given moment. The advice that I give to women is how to take men's initial high powered sexual interest and evolve it into a desire to have a committed relationship with them. This advice is given through a 6 week one on one dating boot camp.

Here are the top 5 ways to keep him interested and also get him to commit:

- 1) Wait 3 months before you sleep with him. A physical bond (sex) to a guy is easily broken. A bond that a man will not break is one that is emotional and personality based. Make him actually love spending time with you. Connect on a cerebral level with intermittent physical connecting that doesn't result in sex. When you have bonded on an emotional and personality level throwing in great sex on top of that will create a overall bond that he won't want to break.
- 2) Date like a Guy. Live in the moment. Do not mention the future. Do not ask questions about what he does when the two of you are not together. Be able to shift gears and go with the flow without having to plan every second of the time you spend.
- 3) Other People. When you first start seeing him make sure he knows that you are seeing other people. Guys love a women that is sought after and desired by other guys. They also want to compete to make sure that they eventually become the "only one".
- 4) Never ever ask, "where is this relationship going?" If you do the answer will be "nowhere!" Men hate to label anything. They easily feel trapped and smothered. You always must make sure that you as well as the relationship is NOT a sure thing

5) Never ever say " I love you first." Most guys will interpret this as you trying to move the relationship to a deeper level. Keep your words to yourself, let your actions show him how you feel. Before long he will be telling you these 3 cherished words.

My advice may seem like I am advocating a "game playing mentality" when it comes to love. I am simply teaching woman "Man-Management". Men are genetically predisposed to behave in a very predictable way. I provide the insider guide to understanding the way men think and methods in the best way to handle them.
