THE REPUBLICAN RACE: SWEEPING CHANGES

December 5-9, 2007

The race for the Republican nomination nationwide has undergone sweeping changes since October: former Arkansas Governor Mike Huckabee now challenges Rudy Giuliani for the lead, with Mitt Romney on their heels. Just six points separate the three candidates.

Fred Thompson, a strong contender earlier in the fall, has sunk from a strong second to a tie for fourth place. Huckabee, a former Baptist minister and evangelical himself, has made impressive gains in this poll among white evangelical voters.

21% of Republican primary voters now support Huckabee, up from just 4% in October. Huckabee's surge has come at the expense of both Giuliani and Thompson. The former New York City Mayor's support has shrunk from 38% in August and 29% in October to 22% now. Thompson's support has dropped precipitously, from 21% in October to 7% now. Mitt Romney has risen to 16% in this poll, from 12% in October. John McCain now garners less than one in 10 primary voters.

REPUBLICAN CHOICE FOR THE NOMINATION

(Among Republican Primary Voters)

	Now	10/07
Giuliani	22%	29%
Huckabee	21	4
Romney	16	12
McCain	7	18
Thompson	7	21

Huckabee is now in a commanding position among the more conservative blocs of Republican primary voters - he has posted double-digit gains among conservatives, white evangelicals and those who attend church weekly. Both Giuliani's and Thompson's standing among those voters has declined. Romney receives support from those who attend religious services weekly (43% of Republican primary voters), and ties Huckabee among this group of voters.

Thompson	8	24	7	29	7	28
McCain	6	16	7	15	6	18

The poll was conducted in the week that attention was focused on Romney's Mormon religion. Most of the interviews were conducted after his Thursday speech about religion and politics.

The race for the nomination remains very fluid. Three in four Republican primary voters say it is too early to say for sure which candidate they will support, and just 23% say their minds are made up.

MIND MADE UP WHOM TO SUPPORT?

(Among Republican Primary Voters with a Choice)

Yes	23%
Too early	76

The sense of settling that existed in the minds of many Republican primary voters in October has dwindled somewhat in the last two months. Now, 52% of primary voters say they strongly favor their candidate, while 37% like him but still have reservations. In October, 50% said they had reservations about their candidate.

STRENGTH OF CANDIDATE SUPPORT

(Among Republican Primary Voters with a Choice)

	Now	10/07
Strongly favor	52%	40%
Have reservations	37	50
Dislike others	6	7

One in four Republican primary voters says they support their choice because of experience, and 16% volunteer stands on the issues. 12% mention their candidate's honesty.

VIEWS OF THE CANDIDATES

Republican primary voters still see Rudy Giuliani as the most electable candidate, and by a large margin. When asked which one of the candidates has the best chance of winning the general election in November, 43% think Rudy Giuliani does. Fewer than one in five see Romney and Huckabee as most electable.

CANDIDATE QUALITIES: MOST ELECTABLE

(Among Republican Primary Voters)

Giuliani	43%
Romney	18
Huckabee	13
McCain	7
Thompson	3

About half of Republican primary voters see each of the front-running candidates as sharing the values of most Republicans, although about a third think Giuliani and McCain do not. Many are still uncertain about Huckabee.

CANDIDATE QUALITIES: SHARES REPUBLICANS' VALUES?

(Among Republican Primary Voters)

	Yes	No	DK
Thompson	52%	16	32
Giuliani	52%	36	12
Romney	52%	17	31
Huckabee	49%	15	36
McCain	47%	29	24

Just over half think Giuliani says what he believes, though 37% think he says what people want to hear. Many also see John McCain and Mitt Romney as altering their message to match the audience.

CANDIDATE QUALITIES: SAYS WHAT HE BELIEVES?

(Among Republican Primary Voters)

	Says what believes	Says what people want to hear	DK
Giuliani	55%	37	8
Huckabee	47%	16	37
McCain	46%	36	18
Thompson	43%	23	34
Romney	42%	29	29

In the past two months, more Republican primary voters are able to express an opinion of Huckabee - and it's positive. Favorable views of both Huckabee and Romney have risen in the past two months, while Giuliani's and Thompson's favorable ratings have declined.

VIEWS OF THE CANDIDATES

(Among Republican Primary Voters)

	Now	10/07
Huckabee: Favorable	30%	12%

Not favorable	32	22
Undecided/DK	30	41
Thompson: Favorable	20%	32%
Not favorable	16	11
Undecided/DK	62	56

So far, more Republican primary voters see the front-running Republican candidates as running positive campaigns. By large margins, they are more likely to think each is explaining his positions rather than attacking the other candidates.

RELIGION AND THE RACE

Religion may always have been important to Republican primary voters, but it now has become a central factor in the Republican race.

Voters who say that sharing their religious beliefs is important express a slight preference for Rudy Giuliani, but Mike Huckabee is close behind. Romney, a Mormon, receives just 9% of their support. Romney does much better with voters who don't think sharing their own religious beliefs is important.

VOTE CHOICE: IMPORTANT CANDIDATE SHARES RELIGIOUS BELIEFS

(Among Republican Primary Voters)

	Important	Not Important
Giuliani	29%	12%
Huckabee	24	16
Romney	9	27
McCain	5	12
Thompson	7	5

Six in 10 Republican primary voters say it is very or somewhat important that a candidate shares their religious beliefs - about the same as two months ago. One in 4 says this is very important.

Nevertheless, acceptance of a Mormon candidate appears to have grown. Now, 52% of Republican primary voters say that most people they know would vote for a Mormon candidate, and 33% think most people they know would not. Last June, just 36% thought people they knew would do so.

WOULD MOST PEOPLE YOU KNOW VOTE FOR A MORMON?

(Among Republican Primary Voters)

	Now	6/07
Yes	52%	36%
No	33	40

More voters now know that Romney is a Mormon in the wake of his speech last week about his religion. 55% of Republican primary voters correctly identify him as such, up from 41% of Republican primary voters in June. Among voters overall, 44% now know he is a Mormon, up from 32% in June. Still, 45% of Republican primary voters and 55% of all voters don't know Romney's religion.

IMMIGRATION, ABORTION AND THE RACE

8% of Republican primary voters cite immigration as the most important problem facing the country, placing it third after the war in Iraq and the economy. The vast majority of Republican primary voters see it as a very serious problem - 77% describe it as such. 41% think that illegal immigrants should be required to leave the U.S. and their jobs here.

ILLEGAL IMMIGRANTS WORKING IN U.S. SHOULD BE...

(Among Republican Primary Voters)

Allowed to keep jobs, apply for citizenship	29%
Allowed to stay as guest workers	27
Required to leave U.S.	41

These voters have yet to coalesce behind a single candidate, however. Voters who want illegal immigrants to leave the U.S. are tied between supporting Mike Huckabee (29%), and Rudy Giuliani (28%).

Huckabee has a comfortable lead over Giuliani among anti-abortion Republican primary voters.

50% of Republican primary voters say they are dissatisfied or angry about the way the federal government is working. About one in 5 of those voters support Huckabee, and a similar percentage supports Giuliani.

---

This poll was conducted among a random sample of 1133 adults nationwide, interviewed by telephone December 5-9, 2007. 266 interviews were conducted with voters who said they were going to vote in a Republican primary. The error due to sampling for results based on the entire sample could be plus or minus three percentage points, and six points for Republican primary voters. The error for subgroups is higher.
