HILLARY CLINTON, WOMEN VOTERS AND THE 2008 ELECTION
July 9-17, 2007

With a woman as the current frontrunner for the Democratic nomination, the 2008 presidential election could result in an historic first - a woman president.

Hillary Clinton continues to be the Democratic front-runner, and many voters think she can win in November. Voters think Clinton would be effective at handling health care and dealing with foreign countries, but many are skeptical about her ability to deal with an international crisis and a large minority is dubious about her in the role of commander in chief - though most voters acknowledge her strong leadership skills. On nearly every question asked about Clinton, there is a significant gender gap, with women holding much more positive views of her than men.

Although her husband, former President Bill Clinton, has played a more visible role in her campaign in recent weeks, half of voters think her marriage to him will not impact her support one way or the other.

This CBS News/New York Times Poll included additional interviews with women (which were then weighted to their proper proportion in the total sample), to facilitate a deeper exploration of women's views on the election, and on Hillary Clinton in particular as potentially the first female President.

CAN SHE WIN?

Most voters view Clinton as a strong contender for President next November, if she wins the Democratic nomination. 63% think it very or somewhat likely she will win, and just 35% think that it is not likely. Majorities of both men and women think she will win.

LIKELY CLINTON WILL WIN IN NOVEMBER 2008?

(Among registered voters)

	All	Women	Men
Very/somewhat likely	63%	65%	59%
Not very/not at all likely	35	32	40

Even most Republicans think she can win next year. 53% of Republicans think it is likely she will win if nominated (as do 77% of Democrats), while 45% think it is not likely.

CLINTON AND ISSUES

The war in Iraq tops the list of issues that voters say will be important in their vote for president, followed by terrorism, the economy and health care. Among women voters, health care ranks second, after the war in Iraq.

And perceptions of how Clinton would handle health care are quite positive - despite her 1993 failure on this issue. 74% of voters think it is likely she would make good decisions about health care, while 25% think that isn't likely. Although there is a gender gap, a majority of men also acknowledge this about Clinton.

LIKELY CLINTON WOULD MAKE GOOD DECISIONS ABOUT HEALTH CARE?

(Among registered voters)

	All	Women	Men
Very/somewhat likely	74%	80%	67%
Not very/not at all likely	25	18	31

But voters show concern about Clinton's ability to deal with an international crisis. 42% are confident in how she would handle one, but even more, 52%, are uneasy. Men clearly doubt her ability to do so; 58% would be uneasy, and just 37% would be confident. Women are divided.

CLINTON HANDLING AN INTERNATIONAL CRISIS

(Among registered voters)

	All	Women	Men
Confident	42%	47%	37%
Uneasy	52	46	58

A majority of voters overall thinks it likely Clinton would be an effective commander in chief, although 41% think that isn't likely. Again, men are more skeptical about Clinton's skills; nearly half say that it is not likely she would be effective in that role.

CLINTON AS EFFECTIVE COMMANDER IN CHIEF?

(Among registered voters)

	All	Women	Men
Very/somewhat likely	58%	63%	52%
Not very/not at all likely	41	35	47

Voters do think it is likely that Clinton would make good decisions in dealing with foreign countries. 68% say that is likely, while 30% think it is not. Even a majority of men think it likely.

LIKELY CLINTON WOULD MAKE GOOD DECISIONS DEALING WITH FOREIGN COUNTRIES?

(Among registered voters)

	All	Women	Men
Very/somewhat likely	68%	72%	64%
Not very/not at all likely	30	25	35

The most pressing issue of the day is, as it has been for many months now, the war in Iraq. 41% of voters believe Clinton's vote authorizing the war was a mistake, 53% think it was not. But those who see it as a mistake don't feel overwhelmingly that Clinton needs to apologize; they are divided, with half saying she ought to, and half saying that isn't necessary.

WAS CLINTON'S VOTE ON WAR IN IRAQ A MISTAKE?

(Among registered voters)

	All	Women	Men	Dem. Primary Voters
Yes	41%	45%	37%	58%
No	53	47	58	37

Among Democratic primary voters, 58% think Clinton's vote in favor of the Iraq war was a mistake, but they are divided on whether she should apologize or not. Men are less likely than women to think her vote to authorize the war was a mistake.

Many voters, both male and female, think that Hillary Clinton has worked hard as a Senator from New York. 46% of voters say she has, and just 7% say she has not. But many - 46% -- aren't sure. More women than men think she has worked hard.

Clinton is clearly viewed as a liberal by voters. 53% say she is, and 29% describe her as a moderate. Men (60%) are much more apt to describe her as a liberal than women are (45%).

VIEWS OF HILLARY CLINTON, BARACK OBAMA AND RUDY GIULIANI

In most national polls, including this one, Hillary Clinton leads the Democratic pack for her party's nomination for President among likely Democratic primary voters. Her nearest competitor at this point in a three-way contest is Illinois Senator Barack Obama. And the frontrunner for the Republican nomination is former New York City Mayor Rudy Giuliani.

IF THESE WERE THE CANDIDATES, WHO WOULD YOU WANT AS DEM NOMINEE?

(Among Democratic Primary Voters)

Clinton	43%
Obama	24
Edwards	16

IF THESE WERE THE CANDIDATES, WHO WOULD YOU WANT AS REP NOMINEE?

(Among Republican Primary Voters)

Giuliani	33%
Thompson	25
McCain	15
Romney	8

Clinton, Obama and Giuliani are all viewed as strong leaders, with the largest number of registered voters saying this about Clinton. Obama has a slight lead over Clinton when it comes to believing that a candidate shares their moral values, while Giuliani trails there.

Clinton falls behind on a question about believability, however. More voters think she is likely to say what she thinks people want to hear than say that about either Obama or Giuliani. For each candidate, just over four in ten thinks they say what they believe. Less than one in 10 voters don't have an opinion of Clinton on these questions; far more voters (as many as one in 4) have yet to form an opinion of Obama and just over one in 10 don't have an opinion of Giuliani.

CANDIDATE CHARACTERISTICS

(Among registered voters)

	Clinton	Obama	Giuliani
Is a strong leader	75%	62%	71%
Not strong leader	20	14	18

Does not share moral values	33	12	34
Says what they believe	42%	46%	45%
Says what people want to hear	51	32	42

There are significant gender gaps in how two of these three candidates are viewed. Women hold more positive views of Clinton than men do, while the opposite is true of Rudy Giuliani - men view him more positively than women do.

CANDIDATE CHARACTERISTICS

(Among registered voters)

	Women	Men
Hillary Clinton:
Strong leader	82%	68%

Barack Obama:

Rudy Giuliani:
Strong leader	68%	75%
Shares moral values of most Americans	43%	53%
Says what he believes	41%	49%
Says what people want to hear	42	41

Not surprisingly, and by a wide margin, more voters think Hillary Clinton understands the needs and problems of working women than think Obama or Giuliani does. Most voters view Clinton as a good role model for women, and most say that Obama is a good role model for blacks.

Opinions of Sen. Hillary Clinton remain divided among registered voters overall, but women voters view her more favorably than men do. In fact, more women view Clinton positively than they do her Democratic rival Barack Obama and the Republican frontrunner, Rudy Giuliani. Giuliani's favorable rating among men is the highest of any of the three candidates.

Clinton is viewed most favorably by women age 30-44, those who are currently single, liberal, and women who identify themselves as Democrats. Obama is viewed positively by these groups as well. 77% of African American women have a favorable opinion of Clinton, and a majority (65%) of this group also views Barack Obama favorably. Obama does particularly well among women who are college graduates, while Clinton does better with women who are not college graduates.

Clinton remains a polarizing figure, however. In this poll voters were asked to further break down their views of the New York Senator. Those with an unfavorable view of her are more inclined to say their opinion is strongly unfavorable than somewhat unfavorable.

When voters with a favorable opinion of Hillary Clinton are asked to volunteer what they like about her, most cite that she is courageous and strong (30%), followed by smart and intelligent (17%). Other mentions include her health care plan, she represents their views, and she could be the first woman president - each with 6%.

Registered voters who view Clinton unfavorably say they do not like her because they think she is dishonest (20%), followed by disagreements on the issues (13%) and saying she's too much of a politician (12%).

While voters volunteer mostly personal characteristics to explain their opinions of Hillary Clinton, when asked directly, voters are more likely to say their views are based mostly on her political stances rather than on her as a person.

THE BILL CLINTON FACTOR

63% of voters approve of the job Hillary Clinton's husband Bill Clinton did as President, while 33% disapprove. In addition, 51% have a favorable view of him, while 37% are unfavorable.

But voters don't necessarily think the former President will influence the race. 26% think people will be more likely to vote for her because she is married to him, but nearly as many, 24%, think they will be less likely to. 48% think the former President won't have any effect on Clinton's support at the polls.

WILL HILLARY CLINTON'S MARRIAGE TO BILL INFLUENCE VOTERS?

(Among registered voters)

	All	Women	Men
More likely to vote for her	26%	22%	30%
Less likely to vote for her	24	28	20
Won't matter	48	48	48

As with most things about the Senator, there is a gender gap on this question as well. Men are more likely than women to think Bill Clinton will be a factor in her favor in the election; 30% of men think voters will be more apt to support her because of him, compared with 22% of women.

There are also differences by party. Women voters who say they are Democrats are more apt to see Bill Clinton as an asset; 26% of them say their marriage will make people more likely to vote for her, compared to 18% of Republican women.

However, women voters are far more likely than men to call themselves Democrats (men are more likely to identify themselves as Independents). 43% of women say they are Democrats, compared to 25% of men. Undoubtedly, some of the gender differences observed in this poll are the result of differences in partisan affiliation.

A WOMAN AS PRESIDENT?

Will gender matter in people's vote? 52% say it won't make a difference to most voters, but where gender does matter, more think it will hurt rather than help. Just 13% of voters think the fact that Hillary Clinton is a woman will make voters more likely to vote for her, while 33% think it will make voters less likely to support her. There is little gender gap on this question.

WOMEN AND THE RACE FOR THE DEMOCRATIC NOMINATION

Hillary Clinton leads among both men and women who say they will vote in a Democratic primary in a three-way race with Barack Obama and John Edwards.

IF THESE WERE THE CANDIDATES, WHO WOULD YOU WANT AS DEM NOMINEE?

(Among Democratic Primary Voters)

	Total	Men	Women
Clinton	43%	41%	45%

Clinton leads Obama among nearly all groups of women, but Obama runs even with her among the small sample of African American women who plan to vote in a Democratic primary and liberals.

THE STATUS OF AMERICAN WOMEN

Despite Senator Clinton's front-running status, Americans are divided on whether or not society has changed enough to allow women to compete with men on an even basis. 56% of women think society has not changed enough while more than half of men think it has.

HAS SOCIETY CHANGED TO ALLOW WOMEN TO COMPETE WITH MEN ON AN EVEN BASIS?

When it comes to politics, 67% of Americans believe women are held to a different standard than men. 31% say they are held to the same standard. Women are more likely than men to believe women are held to a different standard.

A majority thinks there is still a need for a women's movement to push for changes that benefit women. Seven in 10 women think such a movement is necessary, compared to 57% of men who think it is. The percentage that thinks this is necessary has risen among both women and men since 1989.

DOES SOCIETY STILL NEED A WOMEN'S MOVEMENT?

	Total	Men	Women	1/1989
Yes	64%	57%	70%	58%

Women under 45 are more likely than older women to say society has changed enough so that men and women now compete on an even basis. Similar majorities of both age groups, however, do think there continues to be a need for a women's movement.

When asked to volunteer the most important problem facing women today, equal work for equal pay and general workplace equality each top the list with 12%, closely followed by health-related issues. These are followed by equal rights in general (9%), and juggling work and family (6%).

MOST IMPORTANT PROBLEM FACING WOMEN

(Among Women)

Equal pay for equal work	12%
Workplace equality/glass ceiling	12

Views are mixed among Americans on whether women who work generally make better or worse mothers than those who do not. Men are twice as likely as women are to say that working women generally make worse mothers. Among women, 38% say there is no difference, 25% say working women make better mothers, and 17% say they make worse mothers.

GENERALLY, DO WORKING WOMEN MAKE BETTER OR WORSE MOTHERS?

Younger women are also more likely than their older counterparts to say that working women make better mothers. Also, 28% of women who are currently working say working women make better mothers, compared to 17% who do not work.

This poll was conducted among a random sample of 1554 adults nationwide, interviewed by telephone July 9-17, 2007. The error due to sampling for results based on the entire sample could be plus or minus three percentage points. The error for subgroups is higher. An oversample of women was also conducted for this poll, for a total of 1068 interviews among this group, by selecting them with higher probability than men in households with both men and women. The weights of men and women in mixed-gender households were adjusted to compensate for their different probabilities of selection. The final weighted distribution of men and women in the sample is in proportion to the composition of the adult population in the U.S. Census.
