VIEWS OF GAYS AND LESBIANS
May 20-24, 2010

The percentage of Americans that know someone who is gay or lesbian has nearly doubled over the past 18 years. And as more Americans have direct contact with gays and lesbians, fewer see it as morally wrong or as a choice.

- Nearly eight in 10 Americans know someone who is gay or lesbian, a percentage that has increased by 35 percentage points since 1992.
- 43% of Americans think homosexual relations between consenting adults are wrong, while slightly more - 48% - do not. That has changed since 1978, when a majority felt it was wrong.
- Just 36% think homosexuality is something people choose to be, most (51%) think it is how one is born. That, too, has changed over the years.
- 53% of Americans think it is necessary to have laws that protect gays and lesbians from discrimination in hiring and promotion, 43% do not.

DO YOU KNOW SOMEONE WHO IS GAY OR LESBIAN?

More than three quarters of Americans today say they know someone who is gay or lesbian, a figure that has grown dramatically over the past two decades. When this question was asked in 1992, 56% of Americans said they did not know anyone who was gay or lesbian. More than six in 10 have a close friend, work colleague, or relative who is gay or lesbian.

A majority of Americans of all ages, incomes, and regions of the country know someone who is gay or lesbian, though there are differences. Americans with higher education and income levels are more likely to know someone who is gay or lesbian.

Americans under thirty are particularly likely to know someone who is gay or lesbian, and although older Americans are less likely to, even a majority of those over 65 know someone.

HOMOSEXUAL RELATIONS: RIGHT OR WRONG?

Americans are divided as to whether homosexual relations between consenting adults is wrong – 43% say it is, while slightly more (48%) say it is not. But those views have changed over time. When Gallup asked this question in 1978, six in 10 Americans said homosexual relations between consenting adults was wrong.

There are differences by age: Americans over 65 tend to think homosexual relations are wrong, while people under 30 do not, with those in between more divided. Republicans and conservatives tend to think homosexual relations are wrong, while Democrats and liberals – and to a lesser extent independents and moderates – do not.

Knowing someone who is gay or lesbian affects how Americans feel about the morality of homosexual relations. 53% of those who know someone who is gay or lesbian do not believe homosexual relations between consenting adults is wrong, while 54% of those who do not know anyone who is gay or lesbian think such relations are wrong.

IS HOMOSEXUALITY A CHOICE?

About half of Americans think people are born homosexual, while about a third thinks that is something one chooses to be. These results haven't changed much since September 2008, but when the question was asked back in 1993, Americans were divided.

Knowing someone who is gay or lesbian impacts views on this issue as well. Those who know a gay or lesbian person are more apt to think homosexuals are born that way.

JOB DISCRIMINATION AGAINST GAYS AND LESBIANS

53% think it is necessary to have laws that protect gays and lesbians from discrimination in hiring and promotion. Americans under 65, Democrats, independents, liberals, and moderates all tend to think such laws are necessary, while Republicans, conservatives, and Americans over 65 do not. There are some gender differences on this issue too: nearly six in 10 women think these laws are necessary, while men are divided.

	Total	Men	Women
Yes	53%	47%	58%
No	43	50	35

DIFFERENT TERMS = SLIGHTLY DIFFERENT RESULTS

Americans respond differently when different terminology is used. When asked whether it is wrong, opinion is more closely divided when the term "homosexual relations" is used than when the phrase "same sex relations" is used.

Are Homosexual/Same-Sex Relations Wrong?
	"Homosexual"	"Same-Sex"
Yes	43%	39%
No	48	53

And when the term "being gay or lesbian" is substituted for "being homosexual", Americans are slightly more likely to view being gay or lesbian as a choice rather than something one is born as.

	"Homosexual"	"Gay or Lesbian"
